Progressives On Top, Voters Unimpressed: Battleground Senate Primaries Feature Far-Left Frontrunners and Huge Pools of Undecided Democrats

Fresh polling across five key states (Michigan, Texas, Minnesota, North Carolina, and Maine) shows outspoken progressives leading or nearly tied in their respective Democratic Senate primaries. 40% to 50% of voters remain undecided in most states, signaling deep dissatisfaction with the field of candidates.

- MI: Abdul El-Sayed nearly tied with Stevens, 22% to 24%
- TX: Crockett leads with 35%
- MN: Flanagan tops Craig 30% – 24%
- NC: Cooper leads with 39%, but Nickel isn't far behind at 19% (41% are still undecided)
- ME: Mills leads with 32%, yet Wood pulls 18% with a staggering 51% undecided

METHODOLOGY

This survey was conducted from July 4–7, 2025. Interviews were conducted using a mixed-mode approach of live telephone calls and text-to-web surveys. Results were weighted to reflect the expected composition of the 2026 Democratic primary electorate for each state.

Key Issues: A Glimpse into the Democratic Primary Electorate's Ideological Leans

In addition to testing the Senate primary ballot, the survey probed key ideological and policy issues.

When asked to name the single most important issue facing the country today, Democratic primary voters overwhelmingly prioritized government entitlements.

Other key issue findings include:

- 24% believe the U.S. Constitution should be replaced or fundamentally changed
- 52% back a $15/hour minimum wage, while 27% say it should be raised to $25/hour
- 22% support granting full citizenship to all individuals in the U.S., regardless of immigration status (21% undecided)
- 16% believe having national borders is inherently racist or unjust (16% undecided)
- 73% believe abortion should be legal at any time, with no limits
- 33% say transgender women should be allowed to compete in women's sports (27% undecided)
- 14% support allowing minors to medically transition genders without parental consent or knowledge (20% undecided)
- 40% believe there are more than two genders, and 24% believe there are no limits to the number of genders someone can be
